Senator Lessard
must have understood the fashion of the day, because he recently had a small card made up which in the words of every man who saw it, was "the best advertisement he ever saw"—instead of keeping out in his wardrobe, he wears it.

The file of the daily entertainer is a good one, and they did their best to amuse him with stories which they considered would bring a smile to his face. Since then they've discovered he's a member of the D.P.M., not an M.P., and that's why they've lost some of their space time blushing.

A Georgia man who has twelve-eight children, looks like he never drinks. Personally, we'd prefer a headache to twenty-eight children.

Since the Board of Trade commenced its publicity campaign on Oct. 25 last, no fewer than 87 inquiries have been received concerning the formation in the Edmonton district.

These inquiries have come as a result of the ads appearing in eastern papers and the moustache
during the past week alone there were 93 inquiries. These were distributed among 12 cities in the

DAILY HOROSCOPE
It is your last chance to live up to your New Year resolutions. It is not too late to start some haven't the time or energy to drink to drown it. It's a sign of misfortune if a household hints.

Banking Gain 20 Million

Clearing House Returns Far In Advance Previous Year Here

Going over the top with a vengeance Edmonton's bank clearings for 1926 shattered the 1925 figures and left them trailing to the tune of over twenty and a quarter million.

According to the clearing house figures the banking system is in an outstanding automobile year.

IN THE WORLD OF MUSIC

WALTER DAMROSCH RESIGNS AS N.Y. SYMPHONY CONDUCTOR

Prefers Retirement While at Peak of Popularity—Succeeded His Father to Leadership Forty-Two Years Ago

Associated Press

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Walter Damrosch, who became conductor of the New York Symphony orchestra two years ago at the age of 22, has resigned at the peak of his popularity rather than wait until musical powers begin to wane, as did his father.

End of Era

The director, in accepting his resignation, declared he had marked the end of an era in music.

Mr. Damrosch took over responsibility of the orchestra upon the death of his father, Dr. Leopold Damrosch, who died in 1916.

His resignation will become effective on Jan. 1, at which time he will be succeeded by Arturo Toscanini, who has agreed to direct concerts for children and young people.

Harden on Good

Two men cannot drive the same car, and two men cannot play the same orchestra," said Mr. Damrosch.

He no longer directs four concerts weekly or ten such performances each month, with the result that many have the white hand.

"I am going back, I seem always to have been a blunderer, first with the orchestra, then with the symphony, with the concerts for young people and children, and finally with the radio," he said.

"We have played a concert each week for three years, and the audience estimates to number two million. This is the result of the radio," he said. "They listen to Alberta and Hudson Bay down to Louisiana and Florida."

"Up in North Dakota there are winter months when we are snowed in, and the fire in our wooden shack, with snow piled high outside, makes us listen to your playing of Schubert. This is the result of the symphony, and we are hearing it perfectly."

Large Audience

Over 1,000,000 persons are listening over the radio for two or three years, and the result is that the radio has messages of great music than I have ever played to and talked to in my entire

D'Alvarez Foresees Many Complications

Some amateur musical complications are foreseen by Marguerite D'Alvarez when the new art of television, which promises to make the transmission of vision by electricity—perfection. The optics contrivance, during her summer in England, was the same as now, but the development of television by British scientists is making in this direction. Commenting on the recent visit of the famous violinist Efrem Zimbalist to the Park Lane Hotel in New York this month, Miss D'Alvarez said:

"One of the amusing phases of musical life in London this year has been the introduction of various new inventions for television. The transfer of pictures into electrical form has been successfully accomplished, and the picture can be carried over wires and transferred in this way. The transfer of the musical world is chiefly interesting, however, because the picture can also be switched into a telephone circuit so that one can actually hear a television program. If the same is true of a friend's radio receiver, it would be far easier to receive him if he has musical characteristics."

"The sound of your face, sweet though it may think me, is not the second point—it is a racial or national characteristic that comes in some way definitely or imperceptibly influence that creation, or that it has a genuine vitality of its own. It is a picture with a score, but keep an eye on it for the purpose of ascertaining whether it is a racial or national characteristic or only a gaudy emanation of temporary state of excitement."

"Some faces I hate the sound of, though they are far apart. I have a picture of a man, for example, for whom I have a strong aversion."

"Due to the small part to his high artistic ideals the student of music has advanced into new American orchestras, and the former members of the Civic Theatre produced a trio for violin, cello, and saxophone.

Back to High Notes

As always, as soon might be, the notes can't be counted without the radio programs. Radio station WBBM, Chicago, recognized this and responded to its rule barring the high notes, with the addition of Miss White is one of the most popular singers of mid-western stations.

Tyrol Bridge Wood Sought by Violinists

From the Tyrol, where Rosalyn Varady spent her summer vacation, this excellent cellist has brought to America a piece of wood, a fragment of wood, fragments from an old mountain bridge, which she will use from time to time to repair to her cellos.

The Tyrol mountain bridge wood is required in an old cello is the little bit of wood which is used to give the "soul" of the instrument, and for this replacement it is necessary to find a piece of wood which is known to it will sound no clanging note.

Commenting on her search for wood in the Tyrol, Miss Varady, who has just now replaced the wood which she had brought from the Tyrol is just now being replaced by another piece of wood, which she has been buying by half-pounds at a time.

The Tyrol mountain bridge wood, which has been for hundreds of years the wood of old mountain bridge, and which has stood for centuries in sturdy piles withstanding the swiftest of mountain streams, is used to discover sweet music. It is said that the Tyrol mountain bridge wood, which has been made from the wood of Stradivarius bows, has the true tones.

"The wood cutter's cottage in the Tyrol is a place of great interest, a scene of more than one open, and noisy, and jolly gathering of many harpsichordists. Perhaps the best place for a tree to be used for instruments is in a forest without the forest,"

Miss Varady said. "The Tyrol mountain bridge wood is the best wood for harps and organ pipes, most especially for flutes. The spruce wood is usually chosen for violins.

"The spruce wood is usually chosen for violins.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1926

The Season's Greetings.

To its readers the Bulletin takes the opportunity to extend the wish that the New Year may bring abundance of happiness and prosperity.

The Motive.

The man who tried to rob a North Bay bather under threat of shooting him, told the magistrate he thought that would be an easy way to get money. Sentimentalists who suppose that criminals are the victims of some sort of mental disease should be interested in this first-hand piece of information. The aifment from which most criminals suffer is what used to be called laziness. The bandit is usually a bum to begin with.

More Intervention.

Attention must be paid at the action of Admiral Latimer in landing U. S. marines at a Nicaraguan port. It follows so quickly upon the similar course taken by British officers in Chinese waters, and upon the Senator's comments thereon, as to be embarrassing. The lives and property of British citizens were certainly in no greater danger in Nicaragua than were the lives and property of British citizens in China. Having questioned intervention in the one case, the Senator may not find it easy to justify intervention in the other. Most people will be inclined to think that in either case it would have been a crime if that had not been intervention.

A Real Reindeer "Ranch".

A Vancouver newspaper reports the incorporation of a company for the purpose of starting a reindeer "ranch" in the Mackenzie river valley. The promoters say they will raise reindeer in the same manner as deer. Alaska, where the industry has made surprising developments, and are extending their operations to the eastern side of the mountains and into Canadian territory because of the favorable conditions prevailing there.

Newspaper readers will be glad to find up-to-date information on reindeer ranges, and sunny green pastures in reindeer ranges. Greenland was the last previous location of an enterprise of the kind—which need go further than the announcement of somewhat comprehensive intentions.

It will be recalled that several years ago the Dominion Government sent a herd of these animals into the north country, in an effort to establish a permanent food supply for the Indians. The herd seems to have vanished, in a way to suggest that if reindeer are to flourish in the northern regions they will have to undergo very severe system of protection against hunting, trapping, and also in carefully chosen localities.

As the deer thrive and multiply in Alaska, there is not—on paper—any reason why they should not do as well in the Mackenzie country, if similar food supplies are to be found there. It is to be hoped the newly reported enterprise be successful, and that it will add to the number of animals whose hides or meat are of value in the northland is altogether to the good so far as the residents and the country are concerned. In the benefits, direct or indirect, Edmonton, as the metropolis of the northern trade, stands to share largely.

The Pacific Route or U. S. Routes?

During the navigation season, 30,000,000 bushels of wheat left Montreal in ocean-going vessels. Part of this, no doubt, was wheat from the northern states, a considerable amount of which was en route to the St. Lawrence river. The export from Vancouver has been small during the fall months, perhaps not more than 20,000,000 bushels.

The inference is that more than half the west-ern crop of 1926 has gone, or will go, to the markets of Europe via United States railways, waterways, and air. This is nothing unusual in that. Familiarity has brought about this annual diversion of half—or two-thirds—of the western wheat to the transportation system of the Republic. If the thing had not been happening so often and regularly it would excite interest, but the fact to which Parliament and public should give a good deal more attention than it has yet received.

It seems to be accepted now as inevitable that half or more of our wheat has to go to market through United States channels, though it has been shown that what enters those channels as Canadian wheat does not frequently emerge at the other end as an inferior grade which discriminates the name of Canadian wheat in the British market and depresses the price that can be got for it.

One of the advantages of the Pacific route for western grain is that it is an all-Canadian route, from the moment it leaves our soil and has to be shipped eastward, which should be a decided advantage in the marketing of it. Comparatively little grain has yet gone out that way, and there is little promise held out that the movement from Vancouver will be speeded up during the winter. This means that a larger proportion of western Canadian wheat is going through United States outlets and is subject to the grade-assuming activities of U. S. millers.

The Dead Year

By EDGAR A. GUEST

At midwinter comes the old year's end.
The tolling clock shall sound his bell,
And few shall mourn him as a friend,
Or even remember him with a smile.
The funeral rites for cold, dead years
Give little time for sighs or tears.

Yet this old year, so silent now,
Will bring us many a welcome sound and song
From every blossoming apple bough.
The song birds sing morning anthems range,
To the sun's bright face, and day's gay page.
While he had nature's gold to spend.

He layished beauty on the earth.
In June his roses came to bloom.
Still, as the days went by, he grew with birth,
Bring no one sorrowing to his tomb.
Last autumn, Master Artist, he Made landscapes, portraits, red.

Now all is over, and the year is gone,
What man from birth to death can fare?
And never cause one heart to sigh?
Or bring a tear to any eye?
Full many a hurt by love is borne,
But oft, in spite of that, we mourn.

And so before I leave the new,
Please let me say a word, and sign
And speak a parting prayer for you:
Remembering all your love given to me,
The right and wrong, the ways and ways,
And drop rose into your grave.

If the church is to make men more moral and more ideal, then it must be more spiritual, then it must render them anti-social, then the church ought to be in politics.

The church's business is simply to tell his people plainly on his breast and tell his wife without reference to whether his brother is hungry or not.

It looks to us however, as if this paper is taking a medieval point of view of this whole question:

“We must not only save our laws and our customs as much of the moral convictions of humanity as possible, being sure that these moral standards are rather the human law than the divine commandments.

standards are rather the human law than the divine commandments.

It looks to us however, as if this paper is taking a medieval point of view of this whole question:

“We must not only save our laws and our customs as much of the moral convictions of humanity as possible, being sure that these moral standards are rather the human law than the divine commandments.

D'OYLY CARTE OPERA COMPANY FOR EDMONTON

Famous English Company To Appear in Gilbert and Sullivan's Opera

Just from their departure for Canada, the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company were much in the lime-light. They had a most brilliant edition of "The Mikado", and were given a hearty ovation for their forthcoming tour by the most famous scenic artists in the world.

The exhibition took place in the Royal Alexandra Theatre, and has been given a second edition of Gilbert and Sullivan's Opera.

It was decided to use the same stage, it will be seen for the first time in Canada, for "The Mikado" and "The Gondoliers" are on.

Moreover, entirely new costumes will also be used by the company for "The Mikado", so that there is somewhat of a departure. In some cases, however, they do they break established tradition in that ours the preservation of the old is the best way to go.

The D'Oyly Carte Company will arrive in Edmonton on Sunday, January 2nd, and will remain until Monday, opening their tour with "The Mikado" on Tuesday, February 2, in Montreal. They will be in Quebec for two weeks to which the organization will return, after which the company will return to the coast, returning to the west coast to bring different operas as they come back.

Maker of "Man in Saddle," Producer of Westerners

One of the most popular serials behind the scenes of the west, "Man in Saddle," the western motion picture directed by Sam Gibson's latest Universal serial star, Brian Donlevy, will be shown at the Empire Theatre Monday, January 1st, and will remain until Saturday, January 6th, appearing at 8 p.m. every night. Two weeks in Montreal will be followed by a tour which the organization will return to the coast, returning to the west coast to bring different operas as they come back.

DOROTHY DIX

First, How Much of the Man's Company Can You Stand Without Yawning?—Is He as Interesting When Talking Politics as When Making Love?—Finally, Do You Love Him for Himself or For What He Can Give You?—If These Tests Come Out Positive, You're in Love for Keeps

A young woman asks me if I can give her one reliable recipe by which she may diagnose her own feelings and tell whether she is in love or not. She says that she is engaged to be married to a nice young man, but that she is not sure if he loves her. She asks if there is any way to tell the difference of motives or modes like circumstances and real love in mind to determine whether she is in love or not.

I would that I could answer her question, but I am afraid that the rule-and-except-all formula for ascertaining the difference between the two modes of love is not to be found in any feature from Capital a dair from which it will never recover, or with any other means than the old "trial and error" method. I would however leave without leaving so much as a word.

The most reliable piece of information so important or that could be so valuable to her is to ask him directly. If he says he is in love with her, then she knows whether she is really in love or not. Most of the domestic misery that we see in the world comes from people being made mistakes in this important subject. They interpret the words of their sweethearts as though that a passing fancy was a deathless passion. They are in love with the wrong person, they were married to the wrong one.

The danger of mistaking "near-love" for the genuine article is one to which womankind is peculiarly liable. Girls are apt to be very anxious to know if they are in love with a man, and are apt to pick up any sort of a pinhead article and deduce themselves into a state of misery.

To a woman it is far more important to love than to be loved, because love as a woman loves enough she can forgive every fault and shortcoming in a man. Her affection makes a halo through which she sees no error.

My correspondent does well therefore not to waste time asking as to which womankind is peculiarly liable to be in love with the wrong person. She is in love with a man who is a good man through and through. "Do I love this man with a love that will never fade or in six months will I be wondering what on earth I ever saw in him?"

But by what strict test shall a girl try to find out whether it is pure gold or merely gold-plated?

She can only say by the amount of a man's company she can stand without yawning.

A post has said, "Please do me a small favor all day on an absent fact that has fixed you never say you love." Raist! Anybody can muse on an absent face. That is the secret face that the trouble begins.

You can say nothing about your society when it is over.

Instead of feeling that you are a candidate for a rest cure, then you may be very sure that you are not in love.

Then you can sit down and have the love-making and see if you like the man as well when he is discussing a political situation of the financial outlook as you do when he is telling you that you are the most beautiful girl in the room. Then you can make up your mind whether he is in love with you at first sight.

All of us little sisters, warm up a mate while he is talking to us, as he is to his mother. It is a look of familiarity, however, the language of familiarity is not confined in complimentary terms and the question is whether a man has a charm for you that will make you think he is a good man, or whether it is what he says or whether you merely enjoy him because he makes you.

A third test of love is to be found in whether the man, alone, is sufficient to you to make you be perpetually offering a吻 with him, or to kiss him.

If you prefer spending the evening with him quietly conversing, you may be very sure that you are half in love.

But if you like him best when he is taking you to the theatre or out for drives, or for going somewhere else, then you are not quite sure in love. You may meet for the good times he gives you, then do for the man.

Finally, little sister, remember that the supreme test of all love is how much you like him best when he is in your car and a two-by-four flat looks good to you if only some particular HE is sitting across a little table in front of you.

If you love a man better than you do ease, luxury and pretty clothes and gay times, then you have got the kind of love that is a chronic disease. Turn the dial to the green. Otherwise you have only a slight attack of giddiness and fever, then you pass and leave you none the worse for it.

Broken Threads

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE?
To the home of PROF and MOLLIE ELWELL it was a quiet night in October, 1926. comes a nurse, bearing a woman who has fallen from a train.

Elwell is angry. He has a son, Jim, and Mrs. Jade that night, the woman bears him a girl, and he is angry again.

Then he then moves forward 18 years. The twin, now growing up, becomes adopted and named MARGARET and ELIZABETH, and they are called BETTY and BETTY.

The doctor is in the World War. He then discovers one of the twins loses him. Jim, he is still a young man, and is shocked at what he finds.

He is a doctor.

It is a disease that the father of the twin is dead and that the others are the wives and heirs of 2000 men.

Here, within walking distance of the institution, Mollie again takes up their residence and begins her vigil of waiting for cures.

Mollie, however, was not so sure about this. At least there were some signs that things would get better.

At the hospital they are told by NURSE NELLIE DOWNING that Jim is dead.

She then discloses one of the twins has died.

Elwell is then moved forward and reported dead.

It is discovered that the fatigues of war have led to the death of the others.

Elwell, however, is still alive.

Elwell is a doctor. He is a good one.

Elwell is a good doctor.
